Periodic medica checkups, the booklet points out, make it possible for doctors to detect and treat promptly a number of conditions predisposing to heart attacks. These include: diabetes, high blood pressure, and high blood levels of cholesterol and other fatty substances. The public is urged t replace saturated fats in the diet with poly-unsaturated fats--such as vegetable oils and fish wherever possible and to eat less food that is high in cholesterol. Counting calories is also recommended -- to lose weight, if necessary,
